

First, I don't like how this is being conducted outside of the spotlight. I think a better effort to inform the public at large about the pending decision could have been made. But that could possibly result in some opposition, and we wouldn't want that now, would we? Second of all, I am tired of allowing more of my civil liberties (read privacy) being stripped away from me. Especially when federal agencies disregarded communications that could have allowed them to possibly prevent 9/11. Maybe more time should be spent training them to better analyse (or at the least better respond to) the data they already have access to. Enough is enough!
